INDIANA UNIVERSITY KOKOMO

Indiana University Kokomo developed from a private institution known as the Kokomo Junior College, which concerned citizens operated from the early 1930s until 1945. In the summer of that year, officials of the college invited Indiana University to assume its management and to establish an extension center in Kokomo.

In 1947, increasing enrollment prompted the university to acquire the first of two large residences on West Sycamore Street in which most of the courses were to be concentrated. Meanwhile, services had been extended to Marion, Peru, Logansport, and other neighboring communities.

After an enrollment peak during the postwar years, there was a low point in enrollment in the mid-1950s. An upward shift soon followed, in response to which a new campus was planned. The resulting facility, a comprehensive structure located on a 24-acre site, was completed in 1965. Meanwhile, the extension center had been redesignated as the Kokomo regional campus of Indiana University.

Indiana University Kokomo received its present name in 1968 and is now authorized by the Trustees of Indiana University to offer associate, bachelor's, and master's degrees that are justified by community needs. In 1969, the campus graduated its first class—20 nurses who received associate degrees.

The decade of the 1980s witnessed the construction of a second classroom building, an observatory/lecture hall, and the Kelley Student Center. In addition, several existing buildings were acquired. The campus is now more than twice its original size, covering 56 acres.

A building containing a 41,000-square-foot library, a 200-seat classroom/auditorium, and a 2,400-square-foot gallery/exhibition space opened in January 1995; a fitness center named in honor of longtime IU Kokomo supporters Milt and Jean Cole was added to the lower level in 2013.

A science and physical plant building opened in August 2001. The two-level, 76,940-square-foot facility houses instructional and office space for IU Kokomo's programs in natural, information, and allied health sciences, and the university's physical plant. The building features a high-tech auditorium and more than a dozen laboratories for biology, chemistry, and physics. On February 5, 2002, the building was named Virgil and Elizabeth Hunt Hall, in honor of IU Kokomo's first executive director and his wife, a couple who dedicated their lives to Indiana University and its communities. In April 2016, the Main Building at IU Kokomo, the campus's first building, was rededicated after an extensive renovation. The campus held a ceremonial groundbreaking in 2018 for the Student Activities and Events Center, the first new building in 20 years.
